

Join us for the next Special Connections Meeting

When our special guest will be Molly Murphy

Tuesday October 26, 2010

6:30 to 8 PM

McFarland High School Library

(Please note this month's change in location)

In 2009 Molly Murphy and co-author Mark Sweet, Ph.D. wrote "The CORE of a Good Life: Guided Conversations with Parents on Raising Young Children With Disabilities" as part of the Natural Supports Project at the Waisman Center.

One of the components of CORE conversations is that how we talk about our child and what we say may help or hinder others understanding of our child.

So, how do you successfully share information about your child so others have a better understanding of them?

How do parents help schools understand what is important to them for their child?

Molly will address these questions & provide a means for parents to help information shared about their child travel with their child as they go through school.

Molly Murphy, Ph.D has worked as a resource teacher at Wingra school & as an autism therapist at Integrated Development Services in Madison.

Molly is a facilitator of parent and provider training on the topics of leadership, inclusion, parent/provider collaboration and natural supports throughout Wisconsin.

Molly is a parent of two children.

Please contact Sandra Sherry at 838-4512 by October 25th for childcare.

Who should attend a Special Connections Meeting?

Parents, grandparents, friends and neighbors, principals, teachers, support staff, related arts staff, OT's, PT's, Speech Therapists, anyone who is interested!
